

Ghetto Cowboy Neri: A Gripping Tale of Urban Horsemen in Philadelphia

In the heart of North Philadelphia, where poverty, violence, and racism are all too common, a group of unlikely cowboys are making a difference in their community. These are the Ghetto Cowboys, a group of inner-city horsemen who have found a sense of community and purpose through their love of horses.

The Ghetto Cowboys were founded in 1999 by Greg Foster, a former drug dealer who was looking for a way to make a positive impact on his community. With the help of a few friends, Foster started a small horse stable in a vacant lot. At first, the Cowboys were met with skepticism and even hostility from some in the community. But over time, they have proven that they are a force for good, providing a safe haven for children and adults alike.
