In the realm of true crime, few mysteries are as perplexing and chilling as matricide—the murder of a mother by her own child.

Why Mothers Kill, a gripping and insightful book by forensic psychologist Dr. Rebecca Bailey, delves into this macabre subject, offering both a psychological exploration and a series of true crime cases that will leave readers on the edge of their seats.

Through a series of meticulously documented case studies, Dr. Bailey unravels the complex psychological motivations behind this often-inexplicable crime.

Drawing upon her extensive experience as a forensic psychologist and her in-depth knowledge of psychological theory, Dr. Bailey examines the various factors that can contribute to matricide, including:

- Mental illness
- Substance abuse
- Domestic violence
- Childhood trauma
- Financial instability
- Social isolation

While these factors do not excuse the act of matricide, they can provide valuable insights into the underlying dynamics that may lead to such a horrific crime.

In addition to her psychological analysis, Dr. Bailey also presents a series of true crime cases that illustrate the different forms that matricide can take.

From the story of Susan Smith, who drowned her two young sons in a lake, to the case of Andrea Yates, who drowned her five children in a bathtub, Dr. Bailey's case studies provide a chilling glimpse into the minds of mothers who have killed their own children.

Through her expert insights and gripping case studies, Dr. Bailey sheds light on the dark secrets and disturbing motivations that can lead to matricide.

Why Mothers Kill is a must-read for anyone interested in true crime, psychology, or the complex nature of human behavior.

This book is a testament to Dr. Bailey's expertise and dedication to understanding the darkest aspects of human nature.

If you are fascinated by the human psyche and the depths of depravity that can lie within, then Why Mothers Kill is a book that you will not be able to put down.
